U. S. Official Tells National Education Association Work May Obtain the Money. St. PAUL, July 6 .- Not content with giving millions of money to cities Andrew Carnegie may be induced to part with $75,000,000 or $100,000,000 to build lipraries in country districts, according to Philander P. Claxton, United States Com-missioner of Education, who is here attending the convention of the National Education Association.

Mr. Claxton has discussed the matter with Mr. Carnegie, and while he has no authority to say that Mr. Carnegie will contribute any sums that may be desired, he recommends that counties take action and make applications for assistance.

"Mr. Carnegie was interested in the proposal," said Mr. Claxton, "and asked me how much money it would require me how much money it would require. I told him probably $75,000,000 and possibly $100,000,000. He is determined to give his money away and die poor and here is an opportunity to help him." Mr. Claxton cited a county that had established a library for which Mr. Carnegie paid the cost of building. The county levied a tax to maintain it. Twenty-five years ago the first Carnegie library was years ago the first Carnegie library was established. The progress in library building has been greater since that time than in all the years previous.

"Nevertheless," continued Mr. Claxton. "70 per cent, of the people of the United States still are without access to good
